

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5 A semiconductor device includes an internal circuit carrying out a predetermined process in accordance with an input signal, and a comparison circuit comparing the time required for an output signal in accordance with a predetermined process to be output and an input signal propagation time of an electric line having a line length adjusted to transmit a signal in a desired time.